

In two weeks I will exercise my greatest right as an American. With so many issues to weigh, I rely on our media to present facts without distortion. I rely on you, the FCC, to ensure that the natural boundaries between information and propaganda remain unbreached. I am writing to express my outrage at recent events related to Sinclair Broadcasting.

The imperfection in our electoral system means that residents in swing states will likely decide our next President. This is something that I am willing to accept. I do not, however, believe that media outlets using public airwaves at taxpayer expense should be partisan in their coverage of political candidates.

Whether through "Fahrenheit 9/11" or "Stolen Honor", our public radio and television stations should not be used as vehicles for the political missions of their management. Sinclair has forfeited their objectivity and must therefore forfeit their license. I expect nothing less.
